Cocomore is Gold Sponsor of the Drupal Developer Days 2017

One of the most important events for Drupal coders from all over the world will take place from 21 to 25 March in Seville (Spain) this year.

Cocomore is gold sponsor of the Drupal Developer Days 2017, which will be held in Seville, Spain from 21 to 25 March. The Marketing and IT agency is using the event, which is one of the most important ones for Drupal coders in Europe, to keep its developers up-to-date, to exchange information with leading experts from all over the world and to consolidate its network within the community. For this purpose, Cocomore will be present with a stand as well.

Cocomore is one of the leading Drupal agencies in Germany, official Drupal Commerce Delivery partner and official partner of Acquia. In addition to its headquarters in Frankfurt, the agency also has an IT location in Seville, which is why the Drupal team at Cocomore is especially pleased that the developer days for the open source software will be held in the Andalusian capital this year.

The event schedule: Exclusively female keynotes

The venue of the Drupal Developer Days 2017 is the adventure park Isla Mágica. Here, the international leaders of the Drupal developers will exchange views on current topics in numerous presentations, workshops and sessions. Diversity and equality are an important issue for the Drupal community. In order to set an example for women in MINT professions, this year, female keynote speakers were invited exclusively for the first time, including Angie Byron, Acquia's Director of Community Development, and Juliet Moreiro Bockhop, Microsoft Support Engineer. The highlight of the Drupal Developer Days are, as always, the sprints. During these, the participants develop, test and document new features together, take care of bug fixes and design module interfaces - all to improve the software.
